

IKC CODE OF ETHICS

An IKC (International Kinesiology College) member is both a private and professional person and these two aspects are inseparable. Any professional is not only professional when at work or in his office but is equally representative of his profession when taking part in business or leisure activities. Ethics are the basis from which a sense of responsibility, a moral understanding, and a sense of conscience prevents us doing harm.

- I agree to respect the IKC's constitution, by laws, mission statement and uphold them with the highest legal and moral standards. I agree to abide by the agreements I have made
- I agree to observe the rights of the individual in relation to creed, gender, religion and personal beliefs
- I agree to honour the self responsibility and educational model in my way of teaching, communicating and conducting business.
- I agree to honour the decision making process of the Executive Board and voting members
- * I agree to work honestly and openly with boards, committees, fellow members and such IKC groups as I may become involved with
- I will observe confidentiality where appropriate
- I will respect and support the roles and offices of my colleagues
- I will not assign blame or guilt to any person with whom I am working
- When engaged in the business of IKC boards, I agree to make all reasonable efforts to conduct business at the minimum expense
- I will communicate in a timely, considerate and open manner.
